ZOE named Best Electric Car for the fourth consecutive year at UK What Car? Awards 2017

- Renault ZOE named overall 'Best Electric Car'.
- Renault ZOE named 'Best Electric Car under £20,000' for fourth consecutive year.
- ZOE also a finalist for the Technology Award.

The Renault ZOE, fitted with the new Z.E.40 battery, has been recognised for the fourth consecutive year by What Car? as 'Best Electric Car', as well as 'Best Electric Car for less than £20,000' at an awards ceremony in London yesterday evening. The new ZOE which was also a finalist in the Technology Award provides almost double the previous storage capacity, delivering a 250-mile range (NEDC) whilst retaining fast charging times at an accessible price.

Commenting on the decision to award the ZOE for a fourth consecutive year, Steve Huntingford, Editor, What Car? said: "Given the rate of progress in this class during the past 12 months, this win shows just how much this recent update has improved the ZOE. Renault has kept everything that was already great about the ZOE: its practicality, tidy handling and standard kit. Plus, while range is up dramatically, price isn't. And to include many of the latest comfort and infotainment features as well as fast charging at this price makes the ZOE a truly brilliant all-rounder."
